Artaissance Portfolio Increases to over 2,000 images with the Addition of New Artists & Artwork

Atlanta (September, 2007) – Artaissance is proud to announce the expansion of its art portfolio with the addition of two new artists and the growth of one familiar artist’s selection of unique pieces. Bringing their own artistic flavor to the Artaissance collection are Dana Jones and Alpha Workshops. In addition to works by those two new artists, new selections by David Marty are available for customization and purchase online.

Alpha Workshops is a not for profit organization that trains people living with HIV in the field of decorative arts. The works portrayed at Artaissance are painted and designed by “students” or employees of Alpha Workshops. The pieces are extremely diverse, ranging from fun and funky to sophisticated, and all works utilize creative techniques to develop textures, colors, and styles that are distinctive to Alpha Workshops. A portion of all proceeds that come from the sale of an Alpha Workshops piece are donated back to the organization.

Dana Johns’ landscapes have a heavenly, veiled look, and a pleasingly simplistic focus. She employs soothing, earth tones which would work well in many different decors. She currently has seven pieces, unique to the Artaissance website, all of which would work well in art groupings.

David Marty, born and raised in Palo Alto, California looks back on works by Parisian impressionists for motivation, and his works portray a love for that period in art history. The beauty of the American Northwest is revealed through his paintings, which are plein-air studies, working originally in oil and canvas. The soft lines and almost illuminating colors of his artwork are sure to attract many art lovers to his page at Artaissance.
