Artaissance Donation Showcases the Artistic Ability of Elementary School Students

Atlanta (December, 2007) – Artaissance has found an exciting way to help the environment and the community by donating remnant canvas and paper to a local Atlanta Elementary school.

Recently, Artaissance began donating end rolls of canvas and paper to Ms. Winder's classes at Margaret Fain Elementary School, in Atlanta, Georgia. Normally these remnants of high quality paper and canvas, used for art printing, would have been recycled or discarded. Now, this would-be garbage has another use, as an art medium for elementary school students.

The students' initial responses were so heartwarming that the Artaissance team members even chipped in their own money to purchase proper brushes and paint for the class.

Two Artaissance team members, Larisa Edmond and Kevin Wallace, hand delivered the additional art supplies and spent time creating art with the students of Ms. Winder's class.

Artaissance is dedicated to recycling and is grateful for the opportunity to make a difference in the student's lives.
